who will further broaden our board's mix of backgrounds and expertise."

"We are thrilled to welcome Brent and Tom to our board," said Marc Stapley, Veracyte's chief executive officer. "They are both seasoned business leaders with extensive healthcare industry experience

Mr. Shafer brings over 40 years of experience across health information technologies, medical devices and a variety of healthcare solutions to the company. He previously served as chairman and CEO of Cerner Corporation and CEO of Philips North America and Philips Home Healthcare Solutions. Before that, he served in a variety of roles at Hillrom, GE Medical Systems and Johnson & Johnson. Upon joining the board, Mr. Shafer will also serve as a member of the Compensation Committee.

Dr. Miller is a scientist and entrepreneur with a focus on the nexus of AI, chemistry and biology. He co-founded and serves as CEO of lambic Therapeutics, a biotechnology company that is disrupting the therapeutics landscape with an AI-driven, drug-discovery platform. Prior to that, he spent over 10 years as a tenured professor at Caltech, publishing more than 140 peer-reviewed articles and patents. Upon joining the board, Dr. Miller will also serve as a member of the Regulatory and Compliance Committee.

"I am thrilled to join the Veracyte board to support the management team in advancing their vision," said Mr. Shafer. "I look forward to leveraging my experience to help accelerate the momentum underway at Veracyte with their focus on empowering physicians with the high-value insights they need to best serve patients."

"It's an honor to be a part of a company with such a compelling platform and that is so well-positioned to positively impact the journey of so many cancer patients," said Dr. Miller. "I am particularly excited by the company's increased investment in AI as part of their focus on helping clinicians, researchers and patients gain even further ground on cancer."
