A Message from Bonnie Anderson, Veracyte's Chairman and CEO

At Veracyte, we remain steadfast in our mission to serve the patients and their physicians who depend on our genomic tests for answers that guide care in cancer and other diseases. We are also committed to doing our part to stop the spread of COVID-19 and thus protect the health and safety of our employees and the broader community.

We have established a COVID-19 Task Force that is monitoring developments closely and adjusting our policies as needed to keep our employees safe and ensure that our tests are available to patients and their physicians. We expect frequent government updates and stand ready to comply.

At this time, we have asked our employees who are able to work from home to do so for the immediate future so that we can adhere to CDC goals of social distancing. This will help us further protect those employees who are performing mission-critical work in our facilities. We are establishing measures to ensure the safety and effectiveness of all employees in our modified work structure.

We are also taking important steps to ensure our continued ability to provide test results for patients. These include ensuring adequate supply of reagents and other critical testing supplies, providing physicians with virtual access to test results, and structuring mission-critical laboratory workforce operations to ensure continued receipt and processing of patient samples.

During this challenging time, please know that we are prioritizing the needs of our patients, employees, customers, and the broader community in all of our decision-making. We appreciate your trust in us and will continue to update you as appropriate.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Anderson
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer
